LEARN

SOCIOLOGY, CRIMINOLOGY, AND CRIMINAL JUSTICE AT CABRINI

When you major in Sociology or Criminology at Cabrini, you gain an understanding of a variety of social experiences.

These range from our everyday behaviors and interactions with our immediate community to large-scale social sectors like economies, governments, and the criminal justice system.

You'll learn the skills necessary to analyze these social experiences so that you can apply this knowledge to careers in crime and punishment or other social institutions.

Both majors have the same central focus—the perspective of social structure and social processes—and receive the same grounding in statistics, research, and theory. Students can also apply to enter the Master's 4+1 in Criminology and Criminal Justice program.

The department also supports dual majors with Psychology and Social Work. Students with a strong interest in other majors may work out a four-year curriculum plan with an advisor in the department combining Sociology or Criminology and a second major.
