

CATHERINE YUNGMANN
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR, COMMUNICATION

FACULTY OFFICE HOURS: CATHY YUNGMANN IS IN!

Welcome to my office, located on the second floor of Founder's Hall in the Communication Wing. Over my 32 years at Cabrini, I've accumulated many pieces from my family, friends, and colleagues, which adorn my office walls. Here is a glimpse into some of those pieces, and the stories behind them.

Awards I've received over the years, including an Honorary Alumna Award from Cabrini.

Portrait bust of American composer, conductor, and pianist Leonard Bernstein, created by my grandmother Erna Weill. Bernstein wrote "West Side Story."

Portrait bust of Martin Luther King Jr., created by my grandmother Erna Weill. A cast of this bust is in a Birmingham memorial.

Logo of LulzSec (Lulz Security) computer hacking group. The image was painted by my son Carl, who noted that "any student who recognized the logo was a hacker."

My First Communication Professor doll, made from Dollar Store parts for my birthday by my son Carl.

Watercolors of the same scene at Ricketts Glen State Park painted simultaneously by my 8-year-old son and my artist husband.

Kenyan art purchased during a Catholic Relief Services convention in Nairobi.

Guatemalan painting purchased during a 2009 mission trip with students.

Plaque from Cabrini College Communication Department colleagues acknowledging awards for the YouthVoicesRise.com senior capstone project.

Sample of early use of Photoshop: picture of students in front of the Mansion. This photo was part of a Cabrini College recruitment video from the early 1990s. Check it out at bit.ly/ccrecruit90.

Photo of my grandmother Erna Weill, my son David, and me in my grandmother's New Jersey studio in 1985.

Portrait bust of writer, professor, political activist, and Nobel Laureate Elie Wiesel. Wiesel posed for this sculpture, created by my grandmother Erna Weill in her New Jersey studio.

Toys and goodies for my students.
